TERMS OF THE REBELS AGREED TO.

A CABINET COUNCIL SUMMONED-GREAT EXCITE-MENT IN LONDON.

LONDON, Feb. 22 .- The Daily Telegraph this morning reports the surrender of the garrison at Tokar. The Times confirms this report. On receiving the news, Earl Granville, Foreign Secretary of State, instantly summoned a Cabinet council. An adjournment was taken until to-morrow, pending the receipt of further confirmatory advices. The greatest excitement prevails throughout London and in Parliament, Members of the House of Commons are eagerly asking for details. The Ministers are only able to confirm the special dispatches.

A CONFERENCE WITH THE REBELS, Another account of the surrender has been received from Suakim, which says that Maccaivi, the Governor of Tokar, and Yakoob, with 150 soldiers, left the fort on Wednesday and had a conference with the rebels. When they returned to the town they announced that they were going to surrender themselves. This caused great commotion, as many of the garrison refused to give way to despair but still had hopes that succer could reach them in time. Their, murmurs, however, were of no avail, and the rebels' terms were finally accepted. It is not believed that the rebels put the population to the sword, for it is understood that the conditions of the surrender provided that their lives should be spared.

of the surrencer provided that the spared. Earl Granville has received a dispatch from the Earl Granville has received a dispatch from the British Consul at Suakim to the effect that only those of the garrison of Tokar who had wives have surrendered to Osman Digma. The remainder are trying to reach Suakim. General Graham, commander-in-chief of the proposed Tokar relief expedition, announces by telegraph his arrival at Suakim. He states that no report of the actual surrender of Tokar has yet been received. The troops are being landed at Trinkitat with the utmost rapidity.

A CONSULTATION AT THE WAR OFFICE. The Marquis of Hartington, Secretary of State for War, held a consultation at the War Office with the War, held a consultation at the War Office with the Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief of the Forces, and General Lord Wolseley, the Adjutant-General. It is reported that General Lord Wolseley advises that the campaign be continued against Osman Digma in order to prevent the rebels marching north upon Berber, and that a detachment be sent to relieve the garrison at Kassala.

General Gordon telegraphed instructions to Admiral Hewett, commander at Snakim, to call a conference of the sheiks of the tribes between Snakim and Massowah for the purpose of arranging terms of peace, and also to ask Osman Digma to meet General Gordon at Khartoum, Admiral Hewett not seeing his way clear to act upon the instructions referred the dispatch to the Home Government. THE NEWS CONFIRMED BY SOLDIERS.

SUAKIM, Feb. 22.-Five soldiers have arrived here from Tokar and brought news of the surrender. They report that the rebels beset the town and kept up a constant fire of artillery and rifles. and kept up a constant fire of artillery and rifles.

Letters have been received here from Kassala which report that the garrison of that town is fifteen hundred strong and has sufficient supplies to last a fortnight. The transport Mansourah, loaded with ammunition and cattle, is ashore twenty-five miles north of Suakim.

Calbo, Feb. 22.—A ferment was caused in the native quarter of the bazaar to-day by a rumor that the English had been defeated.

Twelve hundred British troops are now at Suakim, and 3,200 at Trinkitat. The Governor of Kassala favors El Mahdi, and would rather evacuate the town than fight him.

A portion of the Khartoum garrison has left that town. Thirty-nine hundred blacks remain at Khartoum and 3,000 at Sennaar.

COMMENTS ON BISMARCK'S ACTION.

OPINIONS OF NEWSPAPERS IN ENGLAND AND GERMANY.

London, Feb. 22 .- The Times has a long leading article upon the Lasker incident. It says: "At last Prince Bismarck has obtained an opportunity to show his dislike of the country which annually robs him of thousands of conscripts. Congress was ill-advised in sending the resolution: Prince Bismarck was ungracious in returning it. Granting. however, that Prince Bismarck was right in refusing to praise Herr Lasker, his organs are wrong in reviling Minister Sargent. The latter was only obeying his Government, and this is no reason why he should be held up, in defiance of international courtesy and almost of international law, contempt of the German people. It is said that Mr. Sargent is hardly careful enough of forms and ceremonies to please a Court so formal as Berlin, But a worse moment to try and induce him to resign could hardly have been chosen than the present, when his resignation would still further strain the relations of the two countries, which ought to be

Berlin, Feb. 22,-The Destsche Tageblatt comments upon Prince Bismarck's dispatch to Herr von Eisendecker. It leaves the deceased statesman, Herr Lasker, at rest and accepts in a friendly spirit the foreign recognition of a German's personal the foreign recognition of a German's personal qualities. It only repels the interference of a foreign Legislature in the internal affairs of Germany and criticises the diplomatic intermediary methods which was employed in the transmission of the resolution, and then says; "We believe that Herr Lasker was unknown to the majority of Congressmen. Their object in adopting the resolution was to gain German votes in the coming Presidential election and to win the love of Germana at home who are desirons to throw the sales of the Fatherland wide open to American imports."

A SPEECH BY THE PRINCE OF WALES IN THE HOUSE

OF LORDS London, Feb. 22 .- The House of Lords today agreed to the Marquis of Salisbury's motion to appoint a commission on the housing of the poor Prince of Wales addressed the House of Lords on the subject. He said he had been impressed, as all classes had been regarding the condition of the poor. He was gratified that a royal commission had been appointed to look into the matter. He took the liveliest interest in the question and felt flattered at being appointed a member of the commission. The subject was not totally unknown to him. None could say that the laborers on his Norfolk estates were badly housed. The Prince's speech was received with cheers.

The inquiry of the Royal Commission on the housing of the poor is limited to England. This fact causes some disappointment. The commission is composed of the Prince Wales, Cardinal Manning, Earl Brownlow, Baron Carrington and several members of Parliament. The workingmen's representative is Henry Broadhurst, member of Parliament for Stoke-on-Trent. THE DUSH AMENDMENT REJECTED.

Mr. Parnell's amendment cendemning the Government's policy in Ireland was again the subject of debate in the House of Commons this evening. Mr. O'Donoghue, Idberal, member for Trales, censured the Parnellites and accused Mr. Parnell of having humouged and gammoned Irishmen with promises which were never realized. It was by such means, he said, that the Parnellites had obtained power. Although he had separated himself from the Parnellites he denied that he had changed his political ophions. Mr. O'Donoghue vindicated the action of the Government in Ireland.

Mr.Parnell's smendment was rejected by a vote of 81 to 30. The address in reply to the speech from the throne was then passed.

Mr. Gladstone gave notice that he would introduce a resolution on Monday thanking Speaker Brand for his services, and advising the Queen to confer a special mark of favor upon him.

The Right Hon. Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, in the absence of Sir Stafford Northcote, joined in the warm greeting.

AFFAIRS IN THE DOMINION.

BILLS TO RESTRICT CHINESE LABOR-THE SECES. SION MOVEMENT.

OTTAWA, Feb. 22 .- The Dominion Government to-day received two bills, lately passed by the British Columbia Legislature, regarding Chinese immigration. One bill provides that every Chinese person landing in the province shall pay $50. The other bill, which relates to those already in the country, provides that each Chinese person shall pay $10 annually for a license, which would contribute $200,000 annually to the revenue. The Dominion Government, it is understood, is not favorably disposed toward any measure that will restrict Chinese labor until the Canadian Pacific Railway is completed, and may therefore disallow the bills.

The question of renewing the fishery clause of the Washington treaty will come up before Parliament on Monday. The Gevernor-General is taking great interest in the matter. To-day be sent for Senator Howland to obtain his views regarding the proposed renewal of the treaty.

She, however, proved equal to the emergency, and when the fellow had grouned twice Miss Gray, continuing in the same tone of voice as the scene requires, said: "Il scorn, I scorn the man who would laugh at such a scene." Her rebuke met with a hearty response, and the audience fairly shook the building with vociferous applause. At the conclusion of the play the actress was congratulated by several people.

A SUICIDE AT NIAGARA FALLS.

INV TRLEGRAPH TO THE TRIBUNE, I Lockport, N. Y., Feb. 22 .- A fine appearing man, age about fifty, who has for several days been stopping at the Temperance Hotel, Ningara Falls, under the name of Henry Heaton, of Lewiston, Me., killed himself to-day. He apparently came to the village as a sight-seer, and has been seen wandering round the cataract much of the time. The deed was committed early this morning with a razor, in his room. He left quite a large sum of money in his clothes, but no word or scrap of paper was found hinting at the cause of the act. The supposition now is that the deceased came here with the intention of suicide by drowning, but either lost courage or changed his mind.

THE BRIMMING RIVERS.

ANXIETY ALONG THE MISSISSIPPI.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE TRIBUNE.] VICKSBURG, Miss., Feb. 22.—There is great danger of a crevasse at the Illawara Government levee, forty miles above here, in East Carroll. If it breaks, the entire Tensas Basin, embracing the lower portion of East Carroll, all of Madison, Tensas and Concordia Parishes, will be immediately inundated, and incalculable damage done. The levee, two miles below this city on the Louisiana side, gave way to-day, and five feet of water is now rushing through a crevasse 300 feet wide. Efforts are being made to have the War Department at Washington order an unexpended balance, in the hands of the United States Engineer here, applied to strengthening the imperilled levees in this district.

RELIEF WORK GOING ON WELL-NO HELP GIVEN

FOR NEW HOUSES. Washington, Feb. 22.-The Secretary of War to-day received several telegrams relating to the floods on the Ohio River and its tributaries. One from Paducah, Ky., says that Captain McGowen has arrived there, and that although they have 3,000 people to care for, they have supplies enough for all. A telegram from General Beckwith at Cineinnati reports the return of Lieutenant Taylor after visiting every' place on the river between Cincinnati and Irouton, with the information that there is and Irouton, with the information that there is an abundance of food everywhere on the line, and that the donations of the Government and of the State bave put the population beyond the want of food for some time to come. General Beckwith also reports that the river is falling rapidly, and that the people are returning to their usual vocations. In response to a telegram from the Mayor of Middlepert, Ohio, asking if he can use money allotted to him by Government for the repair of dwellings, the Secretary telegraphed that the relief fund was only intended for the purchase of food, clothing and other necessaries, and could not be used for the purpose indicated.

GULAR CONDUCT OF LATE. A slight fog hung above the waters of the North River at half-past 9 yesterday morning. Michael Grubey, of Bloomingdale, was wandering along the shore looking for pieces of drift-wood. About opposite the foot of Eighty-eighth-st., he saw what he fancied to be a piece of timber floating down the stream. When he caught sight of it it was between two rocks a few yards from shore. On close inspection it proved to be the body of a man on its back with the feet toward the shore and the mouth open. Grubey ran along the Hudson River Railroad track, which skirts the shore, and meeting John Nevins, a flagman, told him what he had seen. The two men procured a piece of rope and, wading out, fastened one end around the arm of the dead man and weighted the other end to the beach with a large stone. They then started for the Thirty-first Precinct Station but met Officer Thomas O'Connor, who went to the spot with one of them and sent the other to the station to give the information to Sergeant Randall, who telegraphed for a dead wagon. O'Conprocured a boat, into which he the corpse. After searching the lifted pockets he rowed to Ninctieth-st., where the deadwagon was in waiting.

CHICAGO, Feb. 22 .- A petition was forward-

A cursory examination of the letters in the pockets convinced Sergeaut Randall that the dead man was Salmi Morse, chiefly known to the public by his attempts a year ago to produce the Passion Pay. These papers consisted of a letter signed "Gusta" from a woman living in Paris; a theatrical contract between W. J. Fleming and Mary C. Blackburn, by which Fleming agreed to lease the Cosmopolitar Theatre, "hereafter to be called the Broadway Theatre," to Miss Blackburn, and to superintend the production of "On the Yellowtones." Fleming was to receive $1,200 a week in semi-weekly payments, to be paid in any Miss Blackburn was to receive the first $1,800 of the receipts and the further receipts were to be divided equally. This contract was witnessed by Salmi Morse. A bill for a suit of clothes from Vogel Brothers, addressed to Salmi Morse; a bill from F. E. De Verna for properties and a bill for $292 50, of which $146 25 had been paid on account, from Signor Operti for the orchestra; a letter from Rufus Hatch to Miss Blackburn stating that he was unable to attend the first performance of "On the Yellowstone"; a raffle ticket and two or three requests for seats for the Cosmopolitan Theatre were among the other papers. The dead man were a black overcoat, a suit of black broadcloth, a high collar, gaiter shoes and blue stockings, In his shirt-bosom was a large stud formed of amethysts with a small diamond in the centre; on the index finger of the left hand was a gold signet ring; a pair of goldrimmed glasses was suspended around the neck, and in the pockets were forty-one cents in money a pocket-knife and a handkerchief. A high silk hat was subsequently found on the railroad track

It was the opinion of Policeman O'Connor that the body had only been in the water about an hour. There were no marks of violence on it; a scratch on the nose and one on the forchead had evidently been caused by contact with the rocks. Sergeant Randall and others familiar with the locality thought that the dead man had thrown himself into the water from the rocks at the foot of Ninety-third-st, the only point in the neighborhood where the water is deep enough to drown a man. There is a wharf at Ninety-ixth-st, but that is the only one for many blocks. The stretch of the river at this point is known as Waldron's Bay. There were no marks of violence on it; a scratch

Mrs. Franks, of No. 217 West Forty-fourth-st., is a consin of Salmi Morse. She said she had seen little of him lately, but knew that he was in pecuniary difficulties. She added that he was considered flighty by his triends, and they used to laugh at some of his vagaries and anecdotes; notably one to the effect that he had served in the Crimean War, been wounded and was in the receipt of a pension from the British Government.

THE AUTHOR OF "ON THE YELLOWSTONE," At the Cosmopolitan Theatre an interesting story was gathered. The play "On the Yellowstone," in which Miss Blackburn plays the heroine, was the production of Mr. Morse, though until a week ago he strenuously denied the authorship. Miss Blackburn also denied that he was the author until about a week ago. when Mr. Fleming, the stage-manager, who had long chafed at Mr. Morse's constant presence on long chafed at Mr. Morse's constant presence on the stage during rehearsals, insisted on his withdrawal. He then claimed the authorship, and on that account was permitted to remain. He was an intimate friend of Miss Blackburn, having studied law in the office of her father in San Francisco. W. J. Fleming said last night to a Triburne reporter:

I have only known Mr. Morse through my connection with this play. It has been unfortunate from the beginning. I was led to believe that Miss Blackburn had a strong financial backing, but I find I was misled, and we have had much unpleasantness all along on that account. I have had to insist on the company being paid, and a meeting was to be held between Salmi Morse, acting for Miss Hackburn, and Mr. McGivney, the stage manager, this morning at 10 o'clock, when the balance of the salaries was to be paid. I last saw Morse last night about half past 10. He then seemed in very good spirits and was congratulating himself and me on the fact that the plece had beguit to draw at last. He has been drinking rather heavily lately and was undoubtedly very hard up. I always thought he was not guite same. He was bent en producing another play, which he read to me the other day. It was called "Gustaf Adolph," and according to Mr. Morse was far superior to Ehakespeare's "Henry V." He has been nearly crazy for the last week because we could not see a horse with a mane and talt to sweep the ground. He finally told me that he had an idea which would make a great success of the piece. About noon yesterday a messenger boy took a neet addressed to Mr. Morse to the house in Twenty-first-st. As he had not put in an appearance there since Wednesday afternoon it was opened and found to contain the following:

For God's sake come analysis. He is suidnest. I wonder where it has gone.

For God's sake come up above. He is subdued. Come traight to my room. MARY C. BLACKBURN, Miss Blackburn, who was found in her dressing room at the Cosmopolitan after the matinee, was deeply affected by the news she had just received.

She said:

The note was merely upon business. We had some business trouble here, and Mr. More ought to have been here at 10 o'clock. At 11 I sent the note. Last night Mr. Morse walked tomy house, in Forty third-st., withme, as is his custom. We had some oysters at a restaurant in Eighth-ave, near Forty-third-st., and then he saw me to my door. He there said good-night, and we parted.

Miss Blackburn's maid corroborated her mistress's story, but added that Mr. Morse had gone into the Salmi Morse was in his fifty-eighth year, and had led a varied life. According to his own account he acquired his Eastern love while living in a Syrian monastery, which he entered on his conversion from Judaism. The story of his determined struggle to produce the Passion play in New-York is well known. In the early part of 1880 Mr. Morse made his appearance in New-York from San Francisco, where he had produced a version of the Passion Play with reputed success. He prevailed upon Mr. Abbey to favor the idea of reproducing it at Booth's Theatre, and all the preparations were made. At the last moment, however, public opinion proved too strong and Mr. Abbey abandoned the enterprise. Morse still clung to his favorite idea, and in 1882 he leased a church in Twenty-third-st., which he converted into a theatre and announced his intention of there producing the Passion play. Mayor Grace, however, refused to license the place for such a purpose, rendering his decision on December 30. Morse had not only sunk all his own money in this enterprise, but induced many others, notably Messrs. Eaves and Roberts to put in large sums in addition. Finally the place was licensed as a theatre on the understanding that "The Passion" would not be produced, and after the disastrous failure of Morse's so-called comedy, "A Bustle Among the Petticoats," his interest in it ceased. After that he lived in retirement, and took the greatest pains to prevent his identity as the author of "On the Yellowstone" from becoming known to the public. A more beautiful day than yesterday could not have been desired for the ceremonies attending the removal of the bodies of Lieutenant-Commander De Long and his comrades of the Jeannette expedition from Hoboken to the Brooklyn Navy Yard. The air was clear and the sun shone brightly. The procession was imposing and was witnessed by immense numbers of people. At daybreak the guard of militia watching the ten bodies at the Hamburg-American Packet Company's pier, Hoboken, was relieved by another detachment, and shortly after 8 a.m. the tugboat Nina, having on board Chief Engineer Melville, Lieutenant Danenhower, and other survivors of the Jeannette, Lieutenants Harber and Schuetze, and De Long's old classmates in the Naval Academy. The bodies were taken soon after 9 o'clock to Pier No. 1 North River, by the Nina, were there received by a delegation of officers from the Brooklyn Navy Yard, and were then transferred to the hearses in waiting. Each coffin was sheathed in colors, and upon these were placed the floral devices contributed from various sources. The gift of Brooklyn was a model of the ill-fated Jeannette in ivy, ferns and lilies. The hull of ivy, with the white masts wreathed in vines, rose from a bed of flowers, ferns THE MINERS ALLEGE THAT IT WAS INADEQUATE and grasses. This floral tribute was placed on the empty bier in memory of Lieutenant Chipp and his Uniontown, Penn., Feb. 22 .- Among the miners a revulsion of sentiment has taken place during the last twenty-four hours, and the talk of the explosion ompanions. Another device was a large sphere of ivy leaves, bearing an anchor of roses inscribed being caused by negligence is now widespread. The feeling is bitter. People began gathering at the Battery, Bowling Green, along Broadway and in City Hall Square long before the hour of starting. By 11 a. m. all who were to take part in the procession were on hand. Battery place presented a sea of faces; every available point of view was taken. The elevated station was packed with sightseers, and every window overlooking the pier and the street was occupied by eager people. The same sight was to be observed along Broadway. City Hall Square was alive with throngs of humanity, and even the tops of the adjoining buildings were used for a vantage point of vision. Flags were at half mast on the shipping in the harbor, and many buildings throughout the city. THE PROCESSION UNDER WAY.

The petition declares that the protest on the part of the Chicago cattle-brokers, which has hereofore been noticed, is based upon a misapprehension of the provisions of the bill, and that the bill can in no wise interfere with cattle traffic in States not affected with contagious picure-pneumonia, and even in the affected States to a degree no greater than is essential to the eradication of the disease. 23d and 69th Regiments and of the Regular Army Battalions took up the dirge succession. Thirty mounted police headed the line. Then came Commander H. B. Robeson, the Marshal: Captain E. P. Meeker, and Lieutenant D. D. V. Stuart, aides; the Navy Yard Band, a battalion of marines, Major Charles Heywood in command; and Lieutenauts Harber and Schuetze were in charge of the pall. The hearses bearing the bodies moved next into line, the body of De Long being last, and being preceded by the empty bier. thronged over to Brooklyn. The crush of people at the entrance became threatening, but the prompt action of the police prevented disaster. Within twenty minutes the throng was well scattered, and the blockade of street cars was ended.

It was exactly 1:30 when the head of the procession reached the Brooklyn side of the Bridge. Immediately a gun sounded from Fort Greene and the 3d Battery of the National Guard stationed there inced a National salute. The procession proceeded through Sands, Washington and Nassau-sts, and Flushing-ave, to the east gate of the Navy Yard. All along the route the streets were fined with people, and thats at half mast and mourning emblems were on the buildings. As the hearses containing the heroic dead passed many of the crowd stood with uncovered heads, and throughout the vast gathering there was a profound and respectful silence. Finally at the east gate of the Navy Yard were heard the mournful notes of the Dead March in "Saul." The great gates swung open and down the broad avenue leading to the Equipment Building came the procession. The guns of the saluting battery on the Cob Dock bound out a National sulute as soon as the head of the procession had passed the gates.
